Evaluate an article

City council approves new transport budget after four-hour debate

user-7def527138314386

rivertowntribune.com · 163 words · text given by the user · outlet not in the paper

Predictions of the outlet's reliability score from this one article. One article is a weak signal: see the outlet mean on the Publishers page.

What the models read

`[OUTLET]` × 3 `[AUTHOR]` × 2 `[URL]` × 1 `[EMAIL]` × 1

`[OUTLET]` has learned that the city council approved the new transport budget on Tuesday after a debate that lasted more than four hours. Officials said the plan would add funding for road repairs, public buses and two new libraries, and that the first works would start in the spring. Speaking to `[AUTHOR]` of `[OUTLET]`, the mayor said the vote showed broad support across the districts. Critics argued that the plan relied on revenue estimates that may prove too optimistic, and a columnist at `[OUTLET]` called it a gamble. According to a report released last week by the regional statistics office, unemployment in the region fell to its lowest level in a decade, although economists cautioned that the figures could be revised. Lawmakers from both parties said they expected the state bill to reach the floor before the summer recess. For more coverage, visit `[URL]` or write to `[EMAIL]`. Reporting by `[AUTHOR]`; editing by James Carter.

▼ 3 names replaced by GLiNER

Maria Lopez → [AUTHOR] · The Evening Herald → [OUTLET] · Maria Lopez → [AUTHOR]